Dawes in Tirade on Army Muckrakers

Volley of Oaths Is Turned Loose on War Inquiries

Former Head of Supply Service in France Turns Loose on House Investigating Committees, Saying Work Was Polluted by Partisan Politics.

Washington, Feb. 3.—Turning upon house war investigating committees as a whole, Charles G. Dawes, former head of army supply procurement service in France, told one of them today that the value of their work had been rendered useless through injection of partisan politics.

"I resent this effort to reflect upon the entire army because some poor devil blundered in Switzerland," he shouted. "You can not put a blot on the army. What the hell did we go in for—to steal money? It was a republican or a democratic war. It was an American war and yet as a rule these committees try to bring in partisan politics."

"You could use your time investigating to a better advantage right here trying to save disgraceful government waste. You could save more money for the people. But as to France you haven't got evidence to make a case if one existed and I don't believe it does."

Draw Lesson for Future. Representative Flood, Democrat, Virginia, told General Dawes his idea of investigation was to draw a lesson for the future; if bad administration was shown to say so and if there was fraud and graft to find it and see that the others were punished.

"Yes," General Dawes replied, "but don't let this thing go before the people as a partisan fight. Everybody wants to hear something bad about somebody else. I am not here to make charges that would blacken the name of a soldier who cannot come in and be heard."

Asked about grafters who followed the American army to France, Mr. Dawes said: "Yes they were there, some of the most despicable characters on earth, trying to help the army by selling it things it needed at exorbitant figures. There was one man we caught and deported. What's his name? Oh, I don't know. I am not a muckraker. He was a traitor and I wish we could have shot him."

General Dawes praised the men in the army, saying it was the fashion nowadays to condemn them.

There were many women at the hearing, but it didn't face the general who swore constantly.

Record is Great. "Considering everything," he declared, "the record of accomplishment of the war department in getting ready for war was a greater accomplishment than that of the peace time. I don't believe you can pick flaws there and I am not speaking as a democrat."

Long after this committee is dead and gone, the achievements of the American army will stand as an everlasting blaze of glory. You have tried to make a mountain out of a molehill, but the great God in heaven will not let you do that. I am not a republican or a democrat."

Tried of War Talk. Asserting the people were tired of war talk and fault finding, General Dawes said: "There's no news in this. If I wasn't here strutting around and swearing there would be no news in this. Mr. Dawes ripped out oaths as he took up the attempt in some quarters to criticize General Pershing."

It will be 25 or 30 years before Pershing's place in history is fixed, he said. "He could not have won the war had he not fought to put popularity above duty. And let me tell you—the doughboys now complaining will live to see the day when they will be proud they fought under him."

Centralize Authority. Declaring authority in the army should be centralized in peace times as well as in war, General Dawes said the American army was "deteriorating again into a bureaucracy which is bound to prove inefficient."

He pleaded that the army and its officers be protected from muckrakers who pack "fly specks."

"Look at the political politicians who are raising hell about promotion for men who earned it in France," he exclaimed. "They're doing it for party reasons. It's a dirty shame. I wasn't in the regular army, but I can be fair."

Wasteful as Ever. General Dawes declared the government was purchasing its supplies "in the same wasteful and disgraceful manner" as the army did when the United States entered the war. He said the demand for uniforms, heavy taxation and a desire for economy had put the public in a frame of mind favorable to such a change.

He said adding that it might be inaugurated "during the next administration" if "pliancists" who would be effected over not permitted "to stab it in the back."

WAUKESHA MAN TO SUCCEED HULL AS STATE FARM CHIEF

ROCK COUNTY MAN DECLINES TO ENTER RACE FOR RE-ELECTION BY BUREAU.

OTHER OFFICIALS Hemmingway Chosen 'One of Directors—Talk by National President Is Heard.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Madison, Wis., Feb. 3.—George McKerron, of Waukesha, county, was elected president of the Wisconsin State Farm Bureau today after having defeated J. H. Murphy, of Walworth county, who was chosen vice president. Chris J. Schroeder, of Racine county, was elected secretary and C. W. Jones, of Fond du Lac county, treasurer.

A board of directors was selected consisting of: H. C. Hemmingway, Rock county; J. H. Murphy, Walworth; J. F. Sheridan, Fond du Lac; Paul Coven, Walworth; C. S. Rislove, Jackson; D. C. Fidler, Door; Orin Fletcher, La Crosse, and F. J. Miller, Kenosha.

ROCK COUNTY BUREAU TO IMPROVE MARKETING.

As the result of facts learned during the state farm bureau meeting and the conference held in Madison, the Rock county farm bureau is seeking concrete means to improve the system of marketing farm products here. There are 175 farmers from Rock county attending the meeting.

The farmers were inspired by the speeches of J. R. Howard, national bureau president; T. Madelin, market expert; George Hull, national bureau president; and George McKerron, the new president. Confidence in the future of the Rock county farm bureau is being expressed at the annual county bureau meeting being held in the city hall here this afternoon.

George Hull Resigns. George Hull, Johnsonville, president of the state farm bureau for a year, resigned his office. George McKerron, elected to the office, is famed among agricultural men in Wisconsin as a sheep breeder and institute lecturer. He will devote at least 200 days a year to the state farm bureau work.

There were 12 counties represented at the meeting yesterday afternoon. A vote of thanks was extended to the retiring president, George Hull, who refused to have his name placed in the race because of illness in his family.

The present success of the Wisconsin farm bureau is due largely to Mr. Hull, testified the new president in his acceptance speech.

Market Direct. A direct system of marketing was urged by the farmers. It was declared that the consumer as well as the producer is being robbed by the speculator and the middleman. The selling of farm products through a central selling organization was advocated. Rock county farmers attending expressed a determination of adopting such a system of gradually placing their products on the market through a financial credit system, instead of having the speculator carry the market to the detriment of the consumer.

The attitude of the national farm bureau, President J. R. Howard declared, is not to back legitimate farm organizations, but to cooperate with them. Also, the president declared, the bureau is behind the laboring farmer when the farmer is a true friend and customer of the farmer."

GOV. BLAINE ADDRESSES MARKET CONFERENCE.

Madison, Feb. 3.—Speculation and lack of proper credit facilities were declared to be the important factors which cause a great breach between the market price of commodities paid by consumers and the price received by producers in an address by Governor Blaine this morning in a "get-together" market conference here. The boards of trade and brokerage companies were pointed to by the governor as the main instruments of speculation which should either be prohibited or regulated by state and federal government.

Make Tortuous Road. "I think experience has taught that these two agencies are responsible for the long and tortuous road from the farm to the table," he said. Creation of a system of credit extension through state banks, supplemented by cooperative banking, was suggested as a means of stabilizing industry and of preventing the fluctuations in prices which have been declared to be detrimental to both producer and consumer and to society at large.

Speculators Control Situation. Pointing to the fact that price changes often result in flooding the market with products, Gov. Blaine (Continued on page 5).

LOCKED UP FOR HITTING HIS WIFE WITH HAMMER.

James Land, Beloit, was to be arraigned in the Beloit municipal court today, on a complaint charging assault with intent to do great bodily harm. He is alleged to have struck his wife with a hammer during a domestic quarrel. Land was brought to the county jail here in default of bail.

The defendant alleges that trouble brewed between his wife over the purchase of a home in Beloit. When he left for the Dakotas to start a farm, Land alleges he sent his wife $1500 to purchase a home. On his return it is claimed he learned that the wife had made the deed to the property in her own name. This started the trouble which culminated in the alleged assault.

BILL PLANS STATE SOLDIER HOSPITAL

Memorial Institution for Shell Shocked Veterans Proposed.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Madison, Feb. 3.—Both houses of the legislature adjourned today after having transacted routine business of their daily meeting. A number of bills were introduced in the senate and assembly with few outstanding features.

Memorial hospital for shell shocked soldiers of the state was proposed by Senator Huber in a bill asking that $500,000 be appropriated for its construction. At present, gassed and shell-shocked veterans of the war are being treated at the Mendota hospital for the insane. The senator is introducing the bill on request of the American Legion.

Register Automobiles. Registry of automobiles owned in the state would be required under terms of a bill introduced by Senator Burke, Green Bay, which is aimed, according to its author, at reducing the number of cars on the road.

Each automobile registered by the registrar of deeds and the title record-keeper would have to be re-registered annually. County and city officials would be given authority to inspect cars at any time and establish their ownership.

Senator Beyer, Milwaukee, proposed that the state should be authorized to establish and operate municipal milk depots, and to manufacture and sell all dairy products in a bill which was referred to the committee on state affairs.

Food Storage Bill. The Czerwinski bill reducing the time food might remain in storage from 12 to 6 months, and his substitute amending the time back to 12 months on condition that the dairy and food commissioner would not be permitted to extend his time, was sent back to the committee on agriculture.

The senate adopted a change in rules which will permit business to be transacted during a call of the house on a subject other than that on which the call was issued.

Weekly Wages Laid Over. Senator Hirsch's bill for the weekly payment of wages, which is supported by the American Federation of Labor, was laid over to the senate state affairs committee and will be taken up later. A bill by Senator Moran for a closed season on otter and beaver skins was deferred to a later date.

Senator Kuehler's bill regulating the licensing and practice of optometry was recommended for passage.

The assembly state affairs committee reported Assemblyman Gramling's bill to detach a portion of the town of Commonwealth, in Florence county, to create the separate town of Pence.

UNITED STATES MAY CALL CONFERENCE ON DISARMAMENT

Washington, Feb. 3.—A resolution authorizing the president to invite the nations of the world to send delegates to a conference on disarmament was reported favorably today by the house foreign affairs committee. The measure was sponsored by Representative Brooks, Republican, Illinois.

Meet at Capital. Under the resolution the proposed conference would be held in Washington, but the calling of it would be left to the discretion of the president.

First Definite Action. This is the first definite action taken by any congressional committee looking to a conference for general disarmament. The foreign relations committee has reported out a resolution by Senator Borah proposing negotiations between the United States, Great Britain and Japan looking to a reduction of naval building in the future.

NEED LIGHTS IN FOOTVILLE SCHOOL

That the Footville public school urgently needs electric lights is the contention of Miss Anna Lutscher, county visiting nurse, who has just completed a visit to the school. Only one-third of the children examined are 10 per cent underweight. A few pupils need medical attention for tooth, teeth and eye ailments, said the nurse.

The health report from the examination of the Footville school children proves a credit to the school. Sunday evening at Presbyterian church, the entire service will be devoted to music by the choir. Mrs. Eber Arthur is in charge.

CHURCH TO HAVE MUSICAL SERVICE

Arrangements are being made for the song service which will be given Sunday evening at Presbyterian church. The entire service will be devoted to music by the choir. Mrs. Eber Arthur is in charge.

HEADS OF THREE SCHOOLS SPEAK

"Things worth while rest on the high moral of the community," said Supt. F. O. Holt yesterday afternoon speaking before the Athens class at the school. He discussed some of the local problems of education and things learned in visits to new schools in nearby cities.

He outlined the plans for the new school, as being large enough to accommodate from 1,300 to 1,500 pupils and to consist of both the junior and senior classes, with the gymnasium in a separate building. He asked for cooperation in ideals that the building might be finished as planned despite the industrial depression.

Rev. T. J. Lowry, in speaking of the work of the Teachers' Training school, said that over 900 teachers' certificates had been granted by the school during the ten years of its existence. The problem of supplying rural teachers is the biggest before the country today, he said. The model school, mothers' meetings, community center work and other allied works of service were explained.

The work of the 235 pupils attending the vocational school was discussed by Supt. J. M. Devereaux. He outlined the courses presented and efforts made to give boys and girls practical instruction for life work. The program was in charge of Mrs. T. J. Lowry.

New York.—A slender woman with youth of line. Capable hands; instead curved to the "steep arch of thorough-bred."

"Delicate, gentle." Not an imposing figure, but exquisite as the woman of Whistler loved to portray.

Thus Florence Kilgus Harding, wife of the president of the United States, appeared in her first formal interview granted to the press.

Before her was gathered two score newspaper writers, sketch artists, photographers. And meeting her level scrutiny—it seemed quite as if the audience had been turned the other way round—she realized that which is infinitely more desirable than mere magnificence of personality.

It is the quality of inviting friendship. At least this is the way I felt about the graciousness which seemed to reach out to each of us separately and set up a "folks" feeling of contentment. It is embodied in the first lady-to-be, possesses that which is infinitely more desirable than mere magnificence of personality.

New York, Feb. 3.—The ghost of a rooster long since eaten, has come back to haunt four outlaws who encompassed his untimely death, and today the quartet languish in jail here awaiting sentence for chicken theft.

The bandits swaggered into court yesterday comfortable in the belief that all the 35 "fowls" they were accused of stealing had disappeared permanently from the realm of evidence. They planned to plead "not guilty."

Then one of the four espied a fine feathered fowl at the foot of the bench. He was the rooster, he nudged his fellows who gazed for a moment with staring eyes.

"Guilty," said the four in unison.

"Turnkey" took the stuffed rooster back to the taxidermist from whom it borrowed it," said the prosecutor.

Fishermen Have Sport Catching
Herring Through Ice
Marinette—Lovers of hook and line fishing and having great sport and profitable sport catching herring through the ice. During the past two weeks the shore south from Little Sturgeon north to the end of the peninsula has been alive with the most exciting sport of herring over caught in Green Bay. The fish do not come up into Sturgeon Bay but are caught in large numbers out at the mouth and around Little Harbor. The sport is sport as no bait is needed, only something bright on the hook, such as a piece of red flannel. The hook used is generally one without a barb and as the fish are jerked out of the water with an extra twist of the wrist and the fish is thrown out of the hook without touching it.

Some remarkable catches have been made, which are authentic, not fish stories. Recently a woman had 755 fish for her credit in one day's fishing.
Another party reported 900 in one day.
Albert Kalmbach, fish dealer, reports an average of 1,500 pounds marketed daily, and shipments made to New York.

Modern Girls Misunderstood, Says Hygiene Association Head

New York—There was a day, so it is said when young women were not a constant mark for the reformer's arrows; when dress was maidenly, demeanor modest, and wife-service a soon acquired virtue.

It is not too far gone to be recalled,
Mrs. Martha P. Falconer believes.
She is the director of the social protective measures department of the American Social Hygiene Association.
She believes in early marriages, domestic training and many of the old-day standards.

"The girl of today is too often misunderstood," this woman of wide social service would have it known.
Mrs. Falconer is better known throughout the country than in New York city. She came here in November, 1919, resigning her post as head of the Pennsylvania state reformatory for girls to take up this work.

School the Place.
Frankly she gave these opinions gleaned from her great experience, upon which she bases her present
work.
"I would find the girl who may cause trouble before the courts find her. I would try to understand her and supply the wanting elements to develop her normally and naturally."
"The place for this work is in the school. New York is enabled to reach them there especially well because of the close contact the schools keep with all the girls of the city."

"I believe in early marriages.
By that I do not mean marriage at the age of 16, but marriage at the age of 20 or thereabouts, rather than at 27. This will supply a field for the girl's ambitions and energy and enable her to grow up and develop along with her husband. She will be a younger mother, and of that I approve."

Cure for Straying.
"I have made it my business to find out why the misundressed girl so often lands in the court or house of correction. One is a mother unable to comprehend her; often a stepmother of this sort. Another employment hated by the girl. Still another, sub-normal mentality."
"For a long time we have expected too much of our mentally deficient."

Kenosha and Milwaukee Only Aldermanic Cities Paying
Over $2,500.

Janesville will be paying its mayor the second highest salary of any second, third or fourth class city in Wisconsin under the aldermanic form of government, if the 1921 salary schedule is adopted Monday night as agreed upon at the adjourning regular meeting of the council last Monday evening. The payment is to increase the mayor's salary from $600 to $2,500 per year.

One city with the aldermanic form of government, Kenosha, with a population of 40,472, is paying its mayor $3,500. Four other Wisconsin cities are paying salaries of more than $2,500 to their chief executives, but these are the ones under the commission form of government where the mayor is required to devote his entire time to city affairs.

Average Under $1,000
The general average of mayors in cities outside Milwaukee under al-dermanic form is under $1,000. Believe it or not, A. A. Janvin, Kenosha mayor, $800 per year.

Some of the salaries paid in Wisconsin to mayors in cities having the commission form of government, according to the table:
Merrill, $500; Appleton, $1,200;
Racine, $800; Menasha, $1,000;
Two Rivers, $450; Edgerton, $5 per meeting; Janesville, $300; Kaukauna, $600;
Cudahy, $1,200; Manitowish, $500;
Madison, $2,000; Chippewa Falls, $1,500;
Watertown, $300; Rhinelander, $500;
Stevens Point, $500; Ashland, $500; Waushara, $500; Port Koshong, $5 per meeting; and Milwaukee, $6,800.

Salaries paid mayors in cities having the commission form of government, according to the table:
Superior, $5,000; Eau Claire, $3,500; Oshkosh, $4,000; and Green Bay, $4,000.

Alderman's Pay Equal
Further study of the table shows Janesville's aldermen getting $250 to $300 a year, a salary nearly equal to that in other cities, as follows:
Beloit, $2 per meeting; Appleton, $5 per meeting; Racine, $500; Menasha, $450; Two Rivers, $300; Kenosha,
$400; Edgerton, $3 per meeting;
West Allis, $600; South Milwaukee,
$300; Cudahy, $240; Manitowish,
$200; Madison, $1,000; La Crosse,
$200; Watertown, $100; Waushara, $200; Milwaukee, $1,500; Ashland and Port Koshong, $5 per meeting;
and Rhinelander and Stevens Point, $5 per meeting.

MAYOR CAN BE MANAGER UNDER CITY CHARTER.
City management means more than a mere theory. It is not a panacea for all ills of municipal life, and the worst thing about it is that sometimes too much is expected. But it is based on lines of good, sound and efficient business management and in almost every instance is able to show practical results of a nature attractive to the taxpayer. In less than a year in Dubuque, Iowa, a city manager government has improved from a deficit of $70,000 to a surplus.

Janesville operates under a charter that in no sense can the mayor, no matter how many hours he puts in or how much he might do within the limitations laid down by the general law of the city, adopted in 1882, manage the city business. The charter so limits the mayor's powers that no matter how ambitious he might be, his hands are tied. The present charter does not allow the mayor the power of a city manager, and he may try to be, but cannot, because the charter ties his hands.

Aldermen are not only law makers, but law administrators. Powers are delegated to aldermen that are in some cases not good business, like buying trucks and other apparatus for the city. The alderman has the power in that instance of passing on his own acts. Under the city management act of the state the purchasing power is in the hands of the city manager. He is on the job all the time. His work is stated and set.

The city charter of Janesville might be amended so as to give the mayor more power, but even under the general charter of the state in cities of the class of Janesville, the mayor was never considered as an official who had to give much time to the job. That this is so is emphasized in the salaries of mayors of other cities. With very few exceptions cities of Wisconsin pay the mayor about the same as we do. In many there is no salary whatever. The honor is considered sufficient compensation.

"EMERGENCY" AND "CONTINGENCIES"

Former Governor Philipp has entered the controversy over the attack on the Emergency board by State Treasurer Johnson and others, with the outlook that the board is likely to be abolished. The Emergency board was a child of Mr. Philipp's according to his own admission. He says that it was to take the place of the contingent fund plan for state institutions. The governor quotes the law creating the board and asks what would be done if it did not exist and the institutions had no money on which to operate. In 1920 there was paid out by the board $57,625 for the state jail alone. What would have happened if there had been no board to make that appropriation? We would undoubtedly have had a fair, but some of the things done would have waited until the legislature could have made appropriations. It was easy for the Emergency board to pay out a million dollars on shortages in institutions because the governor and the legislature in the winter of 1919 were afraid to appropriate necessary sums to carry on the state institutions for 1920 and 1921 and were looking for a record. So the responsibility was shifted, as it has been many times before, to the Emergency board, where it did not belong. The "contingency" about which the former governor speaks, was made when the legislature passed the appropriation bills. There was no one who had any business acumen that did not fully realize that the "back" would have to be passed to the Emergency board. But there was an election coming on and the Emergency board was a sort of impersonal thing that acted from time to time, and it did not look so big and formidable when the tax commission wanted $37,000 and got it from the board, as it would had the legislature been bold enough to meet the matter squarely and appropriate the money at first. That is where the Emergency board is an invitation to extravagance and should have no place in the state government.

PLEASE DO NOT DELAY.

The school board should not delay the beginning of the work on the erection of the high school for a moment after it is possible to start. It will be possible to start when the plans are definitely accepted. But it seems that these should be fixed without further time spent. It has been more than a year since it was known definitely that we were to have a new building. Let's get at the work. Labor needs it and we need the labor.

OUR BIRD CITIZENS.

Early spring and an open winter have renewed interest in the birds. Wednesday the Gazette began the publication of a series of articles on "Our Bird Citizens." That is the way to look at the birds—as residents and good neighbors. They are the utmost value to the farmer, and in Janesville, too, should be looked upon as a part of the municipal activity. They aid in preserving the trees and save the gardens from many pests. The little fruit they eat is a small contribution indeed to pay for the work they do. In the next month or so the interest in the birds will increase. The Gazette will find another bird cage and bird house, and a number of prizes for many groups.

Art Triumphs in the Theatre
By FREDERIC J. GASKIN

New York City, Feb. 3.—As night after night the New York Theatre Guild continues to place above its box office window a sign reading, "Sold Out!" a surprising truth is becoming more and more self-evident. Namely, that the average theatre-goer is just as eager to spend his money to see a good play as a bad one.

The play which the guild is now presenting to such crowded houses is Bernard Shaw's "Heartbreak House." It is unquestionably of the "highbrow" type, believed by the theatrical circles to be so fatal to the success of the box office. Furthermore, it is not the only play of high artistic merit which is drawing capacity houses here this season. There are at least six others, including "The Mob" and "The Skin Game," both by John Galsworthy; "Samson and Delilah," by the Danish playwright, Sven Langer; "The Woman of Bronze" by Henri Kistner; "The Man in the Moon," which is Karl Schenker's "Der Weibsteufel," and "The Road to Rome," St. John Ervine's latest contribution.

Incidentally, as it may seem, the public is clearly and regularly registering a loud hurrah for Art. Either it has suddenly changed its mind about what it likes on the stage, or all along the big theatrical producers have been wrong. For years, they have been perfectly sure of what the people wanted to see in the theatre. "You want to be entertained, soothed, tickled, shocked, uplifted, and excited, but you don't want to be made to think." Moreover, the plays we give you are bad, but that's why they succeed.

The fact that on an average of 60 per cent of these sure-fire hits have failed miserably a month or so after their production has had no effect on this theory concerning the tastes of the public. The fact that literally millions of Americans are now enrolled in community dramatic clubs, where they learn to distinguish good plays from bad ones, has likewise made no impression in commercial theatrical circles. Still, there is hope. The men at the head of the theatre industry have not much faith in the intelligence of the public, but they have infinite faith in the cash receipts of the box office. And this season is conclusively demonstrating that art is triumphing over twin evils, lingerie, spirit raps, Let-X-Equal-the-Murderer Equations, and the usual quota of feeble musical comedies.

In great measure, it is believed, this sudden rise and popularity of well-written dramas is due to the work of the New York Theatre Guild. In producing Ervine's "John Ferguson" the guild first proved to the New York theatrical world that a play might be good and at the same time a commercial success. In other words, they showed the public that it really was capable of appreciating something good if it got the chance.

The immediate result was that several Broadway producers were compelled to go hastily through their desks and bring forth one or two of the hundred or more excellent plays that had been lying there unnoticed for months, and to consider producing them. It was a risky venture, however, so when "The Jest" was put on to compete with the artistic fame of "John Ferguson," it contained the two safely popular Barrymores, Lionel and John—enough to carry almost any play in New York—while Ethel Barrymore was put in Zoe Aldins' play, "Deception," because it, too, was considered a safe bet.

Later Lionel Barrymore was transferred to the Bronx play, "The Red Robe," giving to the American title of "The Letter of the Law," and Ethel Barrymore was temporarily snatched from the movies to appear in Arnold Bennett's dramatization of his "Book of Carolus."

JUST FOLKS
By EDGAR A. GUEST

NEVER JUDGE A STRANGER.
Never judge a stranger by his clothes. Never stamp your verdict on a man by the grimace on his face. Never judge a man by the builder's plan. Fool is he whose wit conceals a barb. Greatness often walks in common garb.

Billy was a railroad clerk, selling tickets day by day. Knew the time the trains went out, knew the best and quickest way. Billy knew a lot of things, for a youth of twenty-two. And he rather liked to show other folks how much he knew.

One day to the counter came in an unpretentious way. One who seemed of small account, one whose hair was thin and gray. Billy didn't like his looks, didn't like the "The Woman of Bronze" by Henri Kistner; "The Man in the Moon," which is Karl Schenker's "Der Weibsteufel," and "The Road to Rome," St. John Ervine's latest contribution.

Waiting for him at a desk, in a room superbly fine. Was the same old suit of clothes on the president of the line. "Boy," said he, "I've called you in just to say 'don't put on airs.'"

THE WAY TO GET RID OF A PAL IS THE WAY TO LEAD HIM MONEY.

The word "pal" is becoming obnoxious. It used to signify a rare friendship, but of late every newspaper contains news of a "Gangster Killed by Pal." In fact, nearly all the murders are committed by "pals" and nearly all the pal is given over to the police by "pals."

BUT THE LADY STENOGRAPHS ARE ALL OFFICE MANAGERS NOW.
Dear Roy—Noticing with great alarm the great number of "male" stenographers who are substituting those of the fairer sex, I begin to wonder what inducement there is for the business man to stay at his office and accomplish his work.

Also, what about the poor salesman who used to take the sten. out for a good time to get into the good graces of the firm? Not much in it for him. Alas and alack! Now with prohibition, blue laws and "male stenographers," what's the use of living?

FORTY YEARS AGO
Feb. 3, 1881.—The Wisconsin Shoe company's factory is crowded with business and is turning out 300 pairs of shoes daily. They have orders for $30,000 worth of goods to be shipped before the first of March—George Bliss, brother of H. P. THIRTY-ONE YEARS AGO
Feb. 3, 1890.—A daring robbery was performed at the dry-goods store of Burrs and Boland last evening, before nine o'clock. The thieves entered through a window in the rear of the store and stole about $600 worth of fine silks. Mr. Boland was in the store at seven o'clock and locked up well before he left. Police discovered the robbery at nine.

EARACHE
When I was a kid I had my share of earaches. The almanacs didn't play up earaches very much, so nobody thought much about it. Even at the age of 10 I recollect though I can't say so, six months or so I had a naturally inquisitive disposition and conducted researches or rather instigated studies, some of which are not yet completed. I found about that time a very good remedy for earache, which I now offer the world for the first time. It consisted of diaphoresis, which is medicinal for a sweat, and I produced the sweat by absorbing a whole lot of oxygen in a short space of time and a warm room or in warm clothing—I played as hard as I could and presently found relief from the earache. I am not prescribing vigorous exercise as a cure cure for earache, but I offer the discovery for what it may be worth.

I do prescribe a hot mustard foot-bath administered in bed as the best available remedy for acute earache. The pain of acute earache is the pain of congestion and inflammation. Earache is a local earache without inflammation in the ear. The effect of the H. M. P. B. is to equalize the distribution of blood, and this naturally relieves the congestion or tension of blood in the ear.

A critic who evidently disliked this suggested when I made it some time ago, "I am not sure whether it is an H. M. P. B. would relieve earache, a mustard cure had would relieve foot ache, and I had to admit that the idea seemed feasible enough when one considered the length of the article's name."

Never drop any oil of whatever character into the ear canal for any purpose except to smother an itching. Medical alcoholic or watery solutions may be placed in the ear canal. For acute earache perhaps a small twist of absorbent cotton or a small wad of gauze soaked in hot glycerin may be gently twisted, not forced, deeply into the canal, and changed every half hour or so.

A SWEETHEART AT THIRTY

The Story of a Woman's Transformation

BY MARION RUBINCAM

Synopsis of Pleading Chapters. Maid Haines at 35 looks 50, and is considered a hopeless old maid by the people in Henly Falls. She lives with her mother and her two sisters, Lanna, the oldest daughter, James, Violet, youngest and prettiest. Violet's decision to go to the city to collect savings and find some suitable employment into hopeless middle age. She goes to the city with Vi and the two, freed from Esther's oppression, suddenly find out what it is like to be in love with a man. The affair is not very happy. When they return for the summer vacation, David looks so much better. Vi, Lanna, an old maid, and James, Vi quarrels with her son, who mentions a woman his father knows in some other town. There is a reconciliation between Jim and Esther. Esther finally refuses David, and Violet has a letter from David asking her to come back to the city.

CHAPTER I. WE PREPARE TO LEAVE. "I must go," Violet said to me. "Bud wants me." "That in itself was sufficient for her. As for myself, I wanted to see the city, to get back to my little apartment in the city. We lived our own lives there—here, we were subject to Esther's despotism, which looked us, no matter how benevolent she intended it to be. "Then comes out to see us this week," I said. "She's taking a vacation. We can't go until after that. "All right," Vi said, "but I don't like to tell her how much I love her. I'll write to Bud tonight. "I'll write to Bud tonight," I answered. "There's no mail from the village until tomorrow at five. Go off in the morning and write to him. "No, thanks," Vi answered. "Tomorrow is too far away." I smiled a little in the dark. There is no tomorrow in the calculations of youth, though all life is a tomorrow for them.

Month looks at the present moment, age looks backward. Few of us are content to live in, and believe in, the future. Feeling her unhappiness, I was restless too. Hours later I was still awake. I got up and looked down at the clock. It was one o'clock. I had my own thoughts, too, more than enough to keep me busy. Esther said several times that she wanted to go to the city this winter, and now I was sure she really intended to do it. There were several reasons why. "For one thing, I had only enough money for part of the year. I talked it over with Esther only that morning. "I am going to send my check for the first half of the college term," I said. "That will be until February. This will leave enough in my bank account to cover our rent until the end of January, and enough besides to keep us quite comfortable in the city until March. Then Vi would escape the worst part of the country winter—and you know the cold all winter here." "She ought to be used to it," Esther grumbled. "She's spent some 17 winters in Henly Falls." "But her health is never so good in the winter," I answered. "She has a cold from December until March, usually." "Well, she's likely to spend several more winters in the country," I said. "I don't want to see her go. I don't want to see her go," I expressed. "It's a good thing she wouldn't get so many colds." After a time Esther said: "Maybe Jim would say Vi's expenses and the fact you got and all that, and I could go with her this winter. It's a good thing you go—and I guess I need something to happen to me like she has. I don't want to go. I said nothing. After all, I knew I would do whatever my sister-in-law decided. I could not help myself. "Guess Jim might part with the money for the sake of getting rid of me for a few months," she went on.

a little bitterness in her tone. "Then I'd have more time to run around with that Eastlake woman." "Did he tell you anything about it?" I was too curious to refrain from asking. "Not a thing," Esther answered. "I thought yesterday, when you went for a drive alone, he might—well, I thought he was going to talk about it," I suggested. "Thought so myself, when I got over being surprised that he should want me to go driving," Esther answered. "But he was so silent the Sphinx would have seemed like a chatter box by comparison. Finally I couldn't stand it no more, and I asked about her. But not a word. "I asked him at last, was she pretty? He was getting mad by that time and he said yes. I asked, was she young. And he said, not much younger than me. I don't know. He was mad enough to say anything by that time. "Well, about Vi—he might give her the money to go, so's not to have me around, prying into his affairs. Then you could take your money and use it on her third year, till it was gone, else just stay—what little's left of it. "Or perhaps you might go in and stay till February when your money is used up. I can get her to pay the rest of the year's expenses and let me come in." So things stood that night as I lay awake and thought about it. Next day I began gathering up some of our things, putting them in my old trunk—the heavy blankets brought out here and washed and dried in the sun some more. I had made that summer, and other things of that sort. Our place was to be so attractive. And perhaps I could not see it—perhaps I would have to see on here with only Jim and James, in the farmhouse, with a round of work and nothing to stimulate me or make life seem worth living. There was only Helen's visit to look forward to. Tomorrow—Esther's Philosophy

PHOEBE

Mr. Phoebe makes the long journey up from the tropics two or three days ahead of his wife and then sits disconsolate and heartless until she arrives. They are the first of all the many flycatchers to come whirling up from the south, and very often they have a hard time of it when a backward spring retards the insect life, upon which they wholly depend for sustenance. Years and years ago, this pair of lovers, supposedly mated for life, always made their home near the water, preferably on a beam under a bridge over a small stream, but like Jonnie Wren, they have been attracted to home sites near our dwellings, evidently finding a measure of protection near human habitations. The Phoebe, like all the flycatchers, pursues the insects which form its food, on the wing. Who has not seen him mounted on a fence rail or a twig, tail bobbing up and down, wings in a flutter, the very picture of alertness. Suddenly there is a swoop, a dart to this side, now that and back he comes to the same perch, and patiently waits until his next bit of dinner buzzes by.

The Letters of Tessie and Joe

DEAR JOE: Well Joe I was so excited this morning I didn't hardly know whether I was standing on my hands or my elbows. I thought the baby had handed us a tooth at last! All of a sudden he started to laugh as merry as the ace of spades, sort of a surprised laugh, just the way you'd imagine a baby would laugh if it suddenly felt a tooth in its mouth where all had been pure vacancy before. But when I ran into the room Joe it was only another false alarm. The baby was only laughing at your picture! That's much better than getting mad at it and throwing it on the floor the way he did last week, isn't it Joe? At least it shows he has a sense of humor and realizes that when a thing can't be avoided it's wise to make the best of it and just laugh it off. The little angel gained a whole half a pound net weight this week. I took him around to weigh him at Stutz's store (my blue enamel scales are permanently out of order. I'll never buy such expensive scales again—if you drop them twice they're practically useless)—and I weighed him on Mr. Stutz's small scales. I wasn't used to those scales and it took me quite a little time, and Mr. Stutz was waiting to weigh some frankfurters and there were several customers waiting, but just the same Mr. Stutz had no right to make the remarks he made, even when he found out I didn't actually want to buy anything. My baby is more important than a string of frankfurters and I don't care who hears me say so. I've got a new nurse girl Joe. She's Finnish and hardly speaks a word of English any more than the day she was born. But I took her anyway because she's so thin and I'm tired of seeing hearty looking nurse girls at themselves black in the face at my expense while I personally merely nibble like a broken hearted canary, trying to reduce. Lovingly, TESSIE.

Heart and Home Problems

LETTERS MAY BE ADDRESSED TO Mrs. Thompson, In Care of the Gazette.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: I am 17 years old. My girl friend is married and she loves another man better than her husband. Do you think she should go with the other man? I don't know. I don't want to go with the other man.

Dear Mrs. Thompson: My dear mother died when I was a child of seven. My sister raised me until I was 14 and then death took her away. I was left to face the world alone and earn my living. I don't know if I can live better than in a small town.

I worked in a factory there and then came a period of sickness which I would like to forget. I loved a young man who died and a few months after my daughter was born. Then she died and I was left to face the world with a child in my arms. I meant to do right by my child and so I worked hard so that she might be clothed and fed, although I saw her at times.

When the child was six months old I met the man I thought would be kind to me and my child. He promised he would care for her as well as for me. I told him I would never part with my child.

We married and all went well until our own child was born, also a little later my mother died and I was left to give her up. That is a very hard thing to do after all I suffered for her when she was young. He says he will care for her as well as for me. I am only 21 and don't know what to do. I can't go to my in-laws with my troubles as they have caused me many a headache with their lies. I wonder if there will be any more such days when my pretending I try to not be happy although my heart is heavy.

A HEART-BROKEN MOTHER. I finally refused to give up the child. Your husband can't make you part with her without causing a lot of trouble for himself, and that he will not do. You might just as well take your definite stand. When your husband sees that you mean what you say he will have to put up with having her around. Such a situation will never be pleasant, but it will be better than to leave your child in the hands of your lover. Probably if the present cause for his ill-temper was removed he would find a new cause.

I admire your pluck and feel confident that you will win out in the end. I advise you by using tact and good judgment, which I am sure you have.

"Bob": Your letter was a treat. I was sorry to hear of your sister's illness and glad that nothing serious resulted. Your school life seems to mean a great deal to you, and if course it should. No, I am not from Columbus.

"Sus": In regard to work, I. L. Box 41, Amesville, Ohio, has offered to give you a suggestion, if you will write to her.

SHARON (By Gazette Correspondent.) Sharon—John Hayes spent Monday in Janesville. F. C. Denmore who is working in Madison, came home Monday, called here by the death of Will Head. Sharon Emery spent Monday in Janesville. A large crowd attended the sale Monday at the farm home of Mrs. Ellen Pramer. William Carney went to Janesville Monday, where he is taking medical treatment. Mrs. D. O. Bubbs visited relatives in Harvard Tuesday. Charles Shager went to Milwaukee Tuesday where he will attend the Hardware Dealers' convention. Mrs. Nettie Lowe returned Monday from a visit with relatives at Peoria, Ill. Mr. and Mrs. Orley Hickok returned Monday from a visit with relatives in Chicago. McMurray of Janesville spent Tuesday in town. Mrs. John Hayes left Wednesday for a visit in Waikanae with her friend, Mrs. Green. Mr. Hayes accompanied her as far as Chicago.

APPLES, THE HEALTH FRUIT Apples to appeal to the appetite must be delicious if they are to be eaten raw. They should be crisp, cold and full of juice and flavor. If they are not in this perfect state they are best cooked. Seasoning can be added to suit the taste. Apples are a source of health and vigor. Salads of which apples is a component part are decidedly appetizing for luncheon and even a tasteful apple, which we are only too likely to get at this time of the year, can be made appetizing with the vinegar, lemon juice and spices already in season.

For the table, raw apples should be chosen with skins of attractive color. The skins can be rubbed with a damp cloth until they glow and this is the only doctoring needed to make them very attractive. You must yourself be the one to decide at what time of day you wish to eat raw fruit for that matter. Apples are most welcomed by your system. There is an old saying that fruit is golden at breakfast, silver at luncheon and lead at dinner. But fruit is golden at breakfast, silver at luncheon and lead at dinner. But fruit is golden at breakfast, silver at luncheon and lead at dinner. But fruit is golden at breakfast, silver at luncheon and lead at dinner.

PEDDING SAUCES Fruit Pudding Sauce.—Fare two small tart apples and grate the inside. Beat with a cup of sugar and the white of an egg for 25 minutes. This makes a delicious sauce for any hot pudding. Instead of the apple use crushed strawberries or raspberries or the pulp of ripe peaches. Sultana Sauce.—Wash and dry a quarter of a cup of sultana raisins and then remove the stems. Put them with the first with a cup of boiling water and simmer for 30 minutes, slowly, adding more water if it is necessary. At the end of that time the raisins should be quite soft.

WHAT SHALL I DO?

Answered by VIRGINIA PAGE

What Kind of a Party? "Dear Miss Page—I am the president of a club of 13 members. All the girls want to have a party with young men, making 25. Could you please suggest what kind of a party we could have and what to serve?" J. K.

"Well, you could have a 'dinner party'—they're always lots of fun. Or how about a 'kid party'? Or why don't you wait until February and then have a Valentine Party? That gives so much opportunity for attractive decorations and games and favors.

Good old-fashioned ice cream and cake and candy are always in best favor for refreshments at any kind of a party. Though you can vary this, if you prefer, by serving sandwiches and chocolate cake, or a sandwich and chocolate punch, or, of course, you could have some such hot dishes as Welsh Rarebit or Shrimp Wiggle or Crab Newburgh; but this is more trouble and more expensive, and not as nice, I think.

If you need further help, send me an envelope with that stamp and complete address I'm always talking about, and tell me just what you want to do, Gals.

Acknowledge Everything. "Dear Miss Page—In receiving a Christmas present from a lady who was out of town for the holidays, should I have written and thanked her for the same? She also received one from me. And should wedding announcements be answered? If so, how?" M. B.

Yes, indeed, you should have acknowledged the receipt of her gift and expressed your appreciation of it as soon as possible after Christmas. Wedding announcements should always be acknowledged, either by a gift to the bride or a letter of good wishes to the bride and groom, which it should be, depends entirely upon whether you wish to, feel able to, and are under any obligations to, present the announcement with a wedding present or not.

All inquiries addressed to Miss Page in care of the "What Shall I Do?" department will be answered in these columns, at the earliest possible opportunity. However, no inquiries for the great number received. So if a personal or quicker reply is desired, a stamped and self-addressed envelope must be enclosed with the questions. —The Editor.
